

James M Nordlund <reality@informatics.net>

03/27/2003 04:36:50 PM

Record Type:Record

To: Lorraine D. Hunt OIRA ECON GUIDE/OMB/EOP@EOP

cc:

Subject: saving the life of an elderly person is worth less than saving the life of a younger person?

James M Nordlund
813 N. 5 St., #3
Stockton, KS 67669-1561

March 27, 2003

Office of Information and Regulatory Affairs Lorraine Hunt
Office of Management and Budget, NEOB
Room 10202, 725 17th Street, NW
Washington, DC 20503

Dear Office of Information and Regulatory Affairs Hunt:

Hello there! Please consider my views on the following important topics. As you may be aware of, the "O.M.B. Draft Guidelines for the Conduct of Regulatory Analysis and the Format of Accounting Statements" determines that saving the life of an elderly person is worth less than saving the life of a younger person.

As you may very well already be aware of, I'm asking you to please consider the fact that, as an American citizen who is the grandchild, child, relative of a senior citizen, I find that devaluing an elderly person's life is unethical and unmoral. The analysis proposes to devalue the life of a human over 70 to 2/3 that of the rest of the population and lowers the established E.P.A. price tag of a human life from $6.1 million to $3.7 million.

As well, this is a mere pretext to cut the value of health and safety standards in order to protect the industries that stand to gain from this White House initiative.

As you may be aware of, the O.M.B.'s conclusion that the lives of senior citizens are less valuable raises serious ethical and scientific questions.

So, conclusively and finally, if analysis is fully applied, regulations for air pollution, toxic waste cleanup, food labeling and other quality of life issues could be weakened or not even implemented at all, and our senior citizens will feel the brunt of it since their health is the most vulnerable to dirty air and unhealthy food. I'm a known advocate, mental health professional, writer and poet, especially in the U.S.. Thank you very much!

Sincerely,

james m nordlund