Dear Office of Information and Regulatory Affairs Hunt:

Please do not move forward on this OMB cost benefit analysis that values one life more than another. One life is not more valuable than another. This seems as a way to water down pollution control legislation so regulations may not be implemented because the lives of people are not considered valuable by an accounting method.

•This is a mere pretext to cut the value of health and safety standards in order to protect the industries that stand to gain from this White House initiative.

Sincerely,

Larry Zwolinski
