Nancy, it was a pleasure speaking with you a moment ago. As I indicated, the proposed bulletin is an excellent idea and badly needed to help shape consistency in risk assessment. The principles outlined, for the most part, are identical to those we have followed on my research team, Risk Assessment Corporation. In particular, we are crystallizing many of these in work we are performing with Colorado State University related to the Los Alamos National Laboratory. It is called RACER (Risk Analysis, Communication, Evaluation, and Reduction). We will take a look at the proposal you are recommending and provide feedback.

There is more about the RACER project on our web site at www.racteam.com, should you be interested. There is more about RACER in publications on our web site and forthcoming open literature publications.

It was a pleasure talking with you. I wish you solid success and offer my support wherever I can be of help.

Warm regards.
