

From: Jessguessnrandy@aol.com
Sent: Sunday, February 24, 2008 4:15 PM
To: FN-OMB-OFPP Green
Subject: Proposed OFPP Policy Letter

To Office of Management and Budget Team,

Forgive my letter should it lack the usual characteristics of letters typically received at your office. I am but a simple citizen of our USA, residing in the state of California.

My first attempt at reading (and to also have to understand!? Forget it...)this Policy Proposal got me about as far as this email address.

As I am sure that everyone there is more than aware, the typical U.S. citizen does not stand a chance at being able to understand what all the legal jargon and government policy encrypted writing truly means; it seems as if there is always a catch to something and what was once considered to be a good thing suddenly turns very ugly.

I don't like this. I think that our government is for the people. It should better represent what the people of our nation want. And let me tell you, we do not want to be made to feel a fool. We want to be understood and heard and protected from those who seek to inflict ill-will upon us. Now I really do not know whether or not I am for this Policy. At first, the title drew me in but only too soon did the salesman pitch turn me off.

I just do not want to see our natural world suffer any longer. It is about time that we all should stop to think and take personal inventory over what means the most in life and those things which are important enough to be protected from the forces in this world that seek to threaten and destroy them.

When green purchasing policies are mentioned, with seeming intent to promote earth friendliness practices, I expect to hear about some kind of buy-back program/law that requires the makers of items that are known to pollute to be ultimately held responsible for those products throughout their life cycle, clear up until the point of its complete decomposition. Now that is closing the loop!

Please, it is so often a case of 'too little-too late. I don't want that to be the case when it comes to our home planet.

Thank you for your time and also for your understanding.

Sincerely,

Jessica England

Environmental Advocate:)