Generally, the work encompasses problem identification and resolution, compilation and analysis of program and budgetary information gathered from a variety of sources; substantive and technical review of budgetary data, appropriations language and related Congressional reports, and other information; preparation of associated tables, reports, letters, memoranda, and the like; liaison functions within and outside of the Office of Management and Budget (OMB); representation of Branch work at varying levels of government; and a variety of data/information management and administrative tasks associated with budget analysis.

Examples of specific work assignments include:

Monitoring Congressional action on appropriations bills. The employee serves as the focal point for preparation and dissemination of information concerning the Administration's position on appropriations action taken by the Congress. Attends Congressional mark-up sessions; conducts liaison activities with staff of the Appropriations Committees and Congressional Budget Office; maintains computer data files supporting the appropriations monitoring process; prepares letters to Congressional leadership, Statements of Administration Policy, and various supporting materials for use by OMB policy officials and the White House in conducting negotiations with the Congress on appropriations matters.

Working independently or, more typically, as part of a work group, the employee exercises reasoning skills in considering various conceptual, technical, and procedural issues related to the budget process (e.g., implications of the Budget Enforcement Act for OMB reporting requirements, refinement of computer system applications to accommodate evolving technical budgeting requirements). The result of these efforts may include: (1) development of OMB positions on various technical or conceptual issues to facilitate the exchange of information with the Congressional Budget Office, the House and Senate Budget Committees, and the Appropriations Committees; and (2) development and guidance for the OMB resource management offices and other Federal agencies.
